

Berlin Consensus Statement on Concussion in Sport

Guides clinical practice and develops previous understanding surrounding sports-related concussions.

Updated last August 30, 2017
for the 03/08/2017 Consensus Statement.

WHAT IT DOES

The Berlin Consensus Statement on Concussion in Sport is the fifth iteration of a non-binding guidance document intended to guide clinical practice and develop the current understanding surrounding sports-related concussions (SRC). The Consensus Statement offers recommendations about recognizing SRC, removing players demonstrating SRC, re-evaluating players with SRC, how long players with SRC should rest, rehabilitating players with SRC, referring players with SRC to higher care, when to allow players with SRC to return to sports, and reducing future risk of SRC.
